I thought it important to leave in my original commentary because it is still very relevant and the venues at which I spoke are a unique setting that inforces the seriousness of the film.”

The New World Bank Religion and Rulers documentary is part of the Big Bad Bank series, in this documentary Hunt talks about the relation between the United State’s Debt and to its lending practices, issues regarding the acquisition of woodlands and the world banking industry practices.

Hunt describes the documentary by saying, “The information in my documentaries is all backed up by research and I lay it out for the viewers to see. Sure some people disagree with some issues but that is what I like, I like the discussion and finding out the history and possible outcomes of certain situations. I think that we need to get the whole picture and that’s what I try to do in The New World Bank Religion and Rulers.”
